Pi Delta Phi Announces Official Website:

Dr. Paul Wood outgoing Pi Delta Phi President

We at Pi Delta Phi want to wholeheartedly thank Dr. Paul Wood for his invaluable work as President of Pi Delta Phi. Here follow a few pertinent remarks to help you better understand his ongoing devotion and commitment to our honor society:

Pi Delta Phi has been extremely fortunate to have had the excellent and dedicated service of Dr. Paul Wood as its National President. To say that Paul has been devoted to the ideals of our honor society and determined to see it flourish would be an understatement. His steady guidance, his calm patience, his sure knowledge—all have been truly appreciated by all of the other members of the Executive Board. His legacy is one of which Pi Delta Phi can and should be very proud. Merci mille fois, Paul, et merci encore.

Dr. Carleen Leggett, Vice President of the Southeast Region

I first met Paul Wood when I was a new assistant-Prof. at Loyola University in Chicago in 1965. He and his wife, Mary-Lou, were the only persons in my age group at the school, and Paul was finishing his doctorate at Northwestern. I left in 1967 and he, shortly thereafter. We kept in contact once a year via Christmas greetings.

Then in 1988 I became Executive Director of Pi Delta Phi, and the then-President, Sr. Eloise-Thérèse, asked me if I knew of someone who would install a chapter for us at Buffalo State. We were minus a VP for the NE, and Sister couldn’t travel there. I replied that I knew Dr. Paul Wood who was a member and at St. Bonaventure in New York. She contacted Paul who was very helpful and agreed to do the installation.

After that Sister was so impressed with Paul that she made him the regional Vice-President where he continued to serve for eight years doing many installations.

After Sister’s retirement, Dr. Rolande Léguillon conducted an election for President-elect to succeed her after her two terms of office; Paul became President-elect. After Dr. Léguillon’s terms, he was elected as President in which office he has served two terms. During his terms, Paul has also served as Chair at St. Bonaventure and has subsequently retired.

The Board has changed greatly during Dr. Wood’s term of office, and there has also been an unprecedented growth of which he may be justly proud. The Board has become more open to the membership and friendly since he hosted all members to socials and visitations. He justly deserves a well-earned retirement.

Dr. Mary Gutermuth, former Executive Director of Pi Delta Phi

Dr. Paul Wood began his tenure as National President of Pi Delta Phi in 1998, succeeding Dr. Rolande L. Léguillon from the University of Saint Thomas in Houston, Texas. Dr. Wood, who recently retired from full-time teaching at St. Bonaventure University in St. Bonaventure, New York, served nine years as National President and helped to coordinate the expansion of the Society; during his Presidency forty-eight new chapters were welcomed into “la grande famille” of Pi Delta Phi. I’ve had the immense pleasure of serving and working with Paul on the Executive Board of Pi Delta Phi for several years and have witnessed his passion and commitment to the Society and to the study of French language, culture and literature. Thank you Paul for all that you have done, and no doubt will continue to do, for Pi Delta Phi.

Amitiés,
Scott Fish

2007 Joseph Yedlicka Summer Scholarship Recipients Return from France

Teresa Scalard

My name is Teresa Scalard and I am a student at Rockhurst University and one of this summer’s recipients of Pi Delta Phi’s Yedlicka award which enabled me to study in France for six weeks. Before I share some of my most cherished memories I would like to express my gratitude for the opportunities made possible because of the scholarship I was granted. Studying in France had been my dream since I was a little girl and this summer was everything I imagined it could be and more! In Avignon, I was presented with academic and social challenges, learned the meaning of true hospitality, witnessed a marked improvement in my French oral and comprehensive skills, and most of all became even more in love with French culture and inspired to continue my studies in French language and culture.

When people ask me about my time in France the first question that is always asked of me is, “So, are you fluent in French?” I always answer in the same way.

I thought I knew how to speak French... until I went to France and tried to speak it to French people! Thus, the first challenge I encountered in France, one I had not anticipated, was speaking French without apprehension about my dreaded American accent and occasional misuse of verb tenses and vocabulary. Most of the students at the Institute for American Universities which I attended in Avignon shared my fears and in realizing that I was not alone in my blunders, I began to lose some of my shyness and grew to cherish and look forward to the conversations I had with my host family and other people I met. By the last couple of weeks I was so eager and excited to speak French that I would talk to anybody that would listen to me!

My favorite memories from Avignon were made with my host family. Right from the start I knew I was lucky to be placed with such a warm, inviting, and open-minded family. My host mom, Isabelle, always had a question or comment for me that would spark long talks, leaving me smiling in the afterglow of intellectual and cultural conversation. The family's four children were equally warm. On my first day in Avignon they took me on a tour of their favorite places in town, like the park at Rocher des Doms, various shops and of course ice cream stands. During the last week of my time in France, Isabelle and I went running along the Rhone together and me and the two other students the family were hosting, a German girl and a British girl, cooked an international feast to share with the family. We had a great meal together and the kids were very curious about the various creations we cooked!

Since the kids were all very musically talented and since I play piano, we enjoyed playing together and of course, going to different spectacles that were a part of Avignon’s Festival du Théâtre. One thing I absolutely loved about France, and that I now miss, is the number of festivals and opportunities for cultural activity that are always going on in the summertime! There was the famed Avignon theater festival I just mentioned of course, and then cinema and dance festivals, jazz, opera and other music festivals all of which I made sure to take full advantage! Whenever I had time to spare away from my studies, I would find an interesting play to attend, or explore Avignon’s many museums. I also had the chance to visit other cities in the south of France. Whether it was with my archeology and architecture class, an organized trip with all the students from the Institute I attended, or just with some new friends I had met, I made sure to make the most out of the weekend and the TGV!

Even so, I know I have so much more to explore in France. One thing I definitely learned was that six weeks gave me plenty of time to fall in love with France, but passed so quickly that I missed being there almost before I left. Now that I feel more comfortable speaking the language and have developed such an appreciation and attachment for the culture and the people, I have an even greater desire to go back, hopefully to live and work in France. Again I would like to express my gratitude and also encourage other French students and members of

All I can say is thank you, from the deepest part of my heart, for the amazing scholarship opportunity in Paris. My time in France will always be a part of me, and my experiences there will continue to shape my perspectives in every day life. Every aspect of my time abroad was dream-like: the culture, people, architecture, art, food… Everything was just as I hoped it would be, and more than anything I could have ever imagined. To begin with, my classes were phenomenal, and it seems everything fell into place from there.

At the American University in Paris there are so many options for classes; with “An Introduction to Art History” and “A History of Paris through its Architecture” as my selected coursework I was offered a truly unique perspective of Paris. One of my favorite memories of the whole trip was meeting for Art History in our unusual classroom: The Louvre. Daily our group of 20 students, led by one of the most thorough professors I have ever had, would explore the artistic wonders of the Western world, studying everything from the Ancient Greeks to Medieval Art to Impressionism, and relishing everything, including the Nike of Samothrace, La Jaconde, and The 28th of July, Liberty Leading the People. Seeing these and countless other historical and cultural icons in the art capital of the western world can be paralleled by nothing. I feel this was essential in learning about and appreciating the Parisian mind set, seeing art as a part of life, feeling beauty in every day and living amongst historical wonders. With this class in particular I was able to learn from a perspective that would never have been afforded to me in the United States, no matter how much time was spent in museums or pouring over texts. To marvel at an original by Leonardo DaVinci, circle around an Ancient Greek statue by Praxitesles or attempt to sketch in my own hand a masterpiece by Monet is truly a great privilege that you made possible in my life. Being able to see these and other creations that beautify our world was a singular event in my life that was incredibly heightened by being in Paris herself.

My other course was also in the Art Department and continuously left me

It’s extremely hard trying to sum up my experience in Avignon this summer in any amount of space. When everyone asks me how my trip to France was, the only thing I can think to say is, “Amazing.” The experience I had and the people I met while I was studying abroad thanks to the Yedlicka scholarship are things that will stay with me forever.

When I first arrived in Avignon, I was more nervous than I can ever remember being. Staying with a family I have never met was something that seemed extremely scary at first, but my host family turned out to be my favorite part of studying abroad. I lived with a husband and wife who were both sixty years old, and they were pretty much my grandparents while I was there. Every day when I’d come back from classes they’d ask how my day was and always genuinely cared about what was going on in my life. My host mom was also an amazing cook! There was not a single meal that she made that I did not like, and by the time I left to come home I honestly believed I’d gained at least ten pounds from her cooking.

I also strongly believe that the advancements I made in French from my experience in Avignon were due mostly to the practice I got every day from talking with my host family. At first it was a little bit difficult to communicate some basic things just due to a lack of vocabulary. As time went on however talking to my host family turned into a natural thing. It got easier and easier to understand what they were saying to me, and to each other, the first time it was said, which was definitely not an easy feat since they talked so fast. It also helped me a lot and made my experience very enjoyable to sit down after dinner each night with my family and watch French television. We always started with the news, which was extremely interesting since their new president was elected the first week I was there, and then we’d watch American series such as CSI and Cold Case; all in French of course. By the end of my studies I could watch an entire episode and understand it so well that I didn’t even realize it was all in French anymore. The progress I made because of living with my hosts and the comfort they made me feel while I was there are both priceless to me.

The programs I took while at IAU were also very helpful in the development of my French, and they were also really interesting. I took two classes while in Avignon, the first in theater and the second in architecture. The theater course was my favorite out of the two, but only because during the 6 weeks that I was there a theater festival was going on throughout the city of Avignon. There were hundreds of plays each day at various locations throughout the city, so there was definitely never a dull moment. I got to see two of these plays with my theater class and went to several more with some of my friends at night. With architecture I got to travel to several different cities around Avignon to see things like roman ruins and gothic cathedrals, so I also enjoyed that class very much. Both of my classes also helped me better appreciate and understand parts of French culture and history that I hadn’t previously studied as well.

Aside from spending time with my host family, my favorite thing to do was sit at cafes after class with the friends I had made. We would go to a certain cafe called PI every day after class to drink a glass of wine and talk. It felt like such a French thing to do since the cafes were almost always full and there were always interesting things to see and comment on. Now that I’m back in Tennessee, I find myself constantly wanting to sit at an outdoors cafe, and it’s always sad

My experience while in Avignon is something I will obviously never forget. I am so grateful for receiving such an amazing scholarship and being given the opportunity to study in such a great place. While it was hard leaving my friends, family, and especially my boyfriend, I would definitely do it again in a heartbeat. I recommend studying abroad to everyone because it not only lets you into a culture other than your own, but it also shows you who you really are and what you really value, being away from everything you know and on your own. The one thing I would tell anyone studying abroad is to take the leap and totally immerse yourself as much as possible in that culture, and be prepared for a little bit of reverse culture shock when you return home. It was a great feeling to see all my loved ones in the airport when I got back, but I wasn’t prepared for the fact that nothing would be the same as how I left it. I expected to find my home and my loved ones exactly how I had left them, which was ridiculous because I myself had changed so much while I was away, so at first I felt a little out of place in my own life. But as time went on things got back to normal, and I think this part of my experience made me appreciate everything I had been through even more.

Kimberly Bartholomew, Pi Delta Phi Summer 2007 Scholarship winner to IAU (Avignon)

This summer I had the opportunity to study at L’Université Laval in Québec. I believe that studying in Canada had a slight advantage for first time students studying abroad. The surroundings and newer parts of the major cities resemble what a student would be used to in the United States. These familiarities calm down some of the initial anxiety of arriving at Laval. The school is located in Ste-Foy, which is filled with shops, restaurants, and full access to all surrounding bus services. The French Immersion program at Laval does seem to be very thought out. Students are divided into four initial groups: elementary, intermediate, advanced, and superior. Within those groups, the students were then subdivided into levels A, B, and C (C being the highest level in any group).

I was advanced two levels from what my placement initially was. The program is designed to allow the students to change placement if they feel the class is below or above their personal level. Each student took an oral and written language course (which was the main class), an oral expression course, and a phonetics course. The classes were obviously fast paced, lasting only five weeks, but the material covered seemed to be well placed together. The material seemed to have a reason to be taught together, which worked nicely. Every class had an aspect of working with the oral part of the language, but it seems it would have been better if they program would have taken the language class and used it to learn grammar and increased the time that was spent in oral expression and phonetics. The oral expression class was great at teaching the students to think on their feet. The phonetics class was amazing. I strongly feel that when students learn to say things correctly, they will speak more. The campus itself is vast, but connected by tunnels that keep you dry and warm...a savior since it rained three and a half weeks of the five weeks I was there (I kept track of the days it rained). The only real complaint about the campus is that the dining services and the campus services are not open on the weekends. The first weekend I arrived was very tough since I was unfamiliar with the city and the surroundings. There were numerous activities planned by the program each day and there was always something to do. Overall, the experience was great. The Québécois were, at times, impossible to understand, but these experiences helped me to identify my strengths and weaknesses in my knowledge of French. Thanks for the opportunity!

Dr. Scott Fish named Pi Delta Phi President

I hail from Milton, a small town of approximately 5,200 inhabitants in south central Wisconsin. First called Prairie du Lac, the area attracted Pioneer Joseph Goodrich who settled there in 1838. One of Milton’s foremost claims to fame is the octagon-shaped Milton House, a stagecoach inn built by Goodrich in 1844. Residents are also proud of the fact that the Milton House was a stop on the freedom trail; runaway slaves were hid in a small underground tunnel and helped to escape to Canada.

I completed a double B.A. in French and Art (painting and ceramics emphases) at the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater. While a student at UW-W, I spent a semester studying abroad at the Université de Haute Bretagne, Rennes II, located in Brittany, France. I then completed a M.A. in French at the University of Minnesota. During my studies at the U of MN, I had the opportunity to serve as Assistant to the U of MN’s study abroad program in Montpellier, France for three months. After the Master’s degree, I transferred to the University of Wisconsin at Madison where I completed my Ph.D. At Wisconsin, I also served as Editorial Assistant for the Modern Language Journal.

In my free time I enjoy tennis, racketball, rollerblading, reading, traveling, photography, web-page design, gardening, home improvement, weight training, film, and old-time radio drama.

KAPPA BETA chapter at The American University of Paris in Paris, France:

Le 23 novembre 2006, Dominique Mougel et Maud Nicolas ont eu un long entretien avec un futur membre de Pi Delta Phi, dans un salon de thé près des Invalides. Le but était de préciser les critères pour être admis dans le chapitre et les attentes de notre société.

Le 14 avril 2007, plusieurs membres du Chapitre Kappa Beta, se sont retrouvés dans le huitième arrondissement de Paris, au Square Louis XVI pour visiter la Chapelle Expiatoire, très bel exemple de l’architecture néo-classique.

Nous avons pu admirer ce monument que Louis XVIII fit élever, de 1816 à 1826, à l’emplacement même où furent inhumés Louis XVI et Marie-Antoinette après avoir été guillotinés, Place de la Révolution, actuelle Place de la Concorde. Cette visite nous a permis d’évoquer différents événements de l’histoire de France au 18ème siècle.

En ce jour du 27 avril 2007, le soleil était radieux sur Paris. C’était aussi la date choisie pour l’initiation des nouveaux membres à notre société d’honneur:
Zineb Ait Bahajji
Irina Kraicheva
Kenneth Peyser
Petra Prade

La cérémonie s’est déroulée selon la Constitution de Pi Delta Phi, avec les bougies, les drapeaux, la musique et les insignes de notre ordre, en présence d’anciens membres.

Monsieur Henri-Robert Pérez a lu des extraits de deux livres de Julien Green, Américain né à Paris, académicien et grande figure de la littérature française. Dans ces passages, J. Green relatait avec verve et humour sa découverte de la langue française et de la langue anglaise, expressions de deux cultures qui l’habiteraient toute sa vie.

Nous avons conclu la journée dans une vraie joie partagée; nous avons goûté au plaisir de la conversation tout en savourant champagne et petits fours frais préparés pour l’occasion par une pâtisserie de la rue de Grenelle. Une soirée bien parisienne!
